The purpose of this paper was to compare the relative magnitudes of the greatest source of anthropogenic nutrient inputs. However, this can be low when compared to natural land-based and tidal sources. The seasonal mean concentrations of nutrients in the seawater of adjacent coastal areas were calculated from long-term average data (Figure 3). Each loch/voe was associated with the most appropriate sea area and seasonal averages were calculated.