Response to Consultation

Draft Seaweed Policy – August 2013

From: The Glenside Group Limited

Introductory comment:

The Glenside Group is the largest purchaser of Scottish Ascophyllum nodosum and has been and continues to be the mainstay of harvesting activities in the Outer Hebrides.

We consider the use of “seaweed” in the context of much of what is said or written to be a very loose particularly in relation to the varied actual and potential uses which are often highly species specific.

Section 1

Q1 – Agreed

Q2 – Depends on how “area” is defined

Q3 – Yes – environmental safeguards are essential

Q4 – Agreed

Q5 – Agreed – However any large scale cultivation for whatever purpose should not proceed in advance of a detailed and extensive investigation of nutrient balances and the impact on the marine ecosystem of large scale nutrient absorption by large scale introduced sea plants.
